

Jeremy Hill is the director of the Center for Economic Development and Business Research (CEDBR) at Wichita State University. He came to Wichita State University from Georgia Southern University, where he was the director of the Coastal Rivers Water Planning and Policy Center. Hill leads the CEDBR in its mission to provide accurate, reliable information and analysis to inform decision-making in the public and private sectors.

The center provides market research, fiscal and impact analyses, and employment forecasts for the regional and state economies. Jeremy has also contributed to innovative research, analysis and planning in collaborative ventures across Kansas. His research focus has been on business analysis, community development, as well as workforce, tourism and retirement dynamics.

This variety of research has required economic impact modeling, cost-benefit analysis, forecasting, data analysis, and survey development and design. He has been involved in a number of national and regional organizations like the Association of University Business and Economic Research, National Association for Business Economics, and the Kansas Economic Development Alliance.