

Josh Svaty is a farmer from central Kansas and is the former Kansas Secretary of Agriculture. He represented the 108th District in the Kansas Legislature from 2003-2009, was a Senior Adviser to the Regional Administrator at EPA Region 7, and was Vice President at The Land Institute in Salina, Kansas. A part of the fifth generation of his family to farm in Ellsworth County, Josh and his wife Kimberly own Free State Farms, a diversified farm operation that includes small grains, cattle, and an experimental crop grown for The Land Institute. Josh and Kimberly are the proud parents of three children; Jackson, Mariner, and Evelyn.