Stories of the Undocumented:

Cultural Trauma and American DREAMers

Latino/a Narratives and Social Justice in the Era of Operation Gatekeeper

Marta Caminero-Santangelo examines how US Latinx writers are increasingly expressing their solidarity with undocumented immigrants in representing the issues surrounding unauthorized immigration as a form of cultural trauma; and she looks at the narratives of the undocumented themselves—especially so-called “DREAMers”—to discuss their formation of a common group identity and compelling story of American identity.
